The usual program of 16 dances, with four extras, was enjoyed, the kindie orchestra furnishing the music. Punch was served, followed later in the evening by refreshments.

School Notes

The Omega Phi Sorority girls of the El Paso high school have set an example of what may be called the highest type of school spirit, by formally disbanding because it has been alleged that their existence as a sorority is a menace to the best interests of the school.

If the other secret societies of the high school follow their example a president will be established in settling the most serious problem in American high schools. New York, Chicago and Denver have gone through a fight to get fraternities out of their high schools and the contests were taken to the courts for settlement.

The Sam Houston Debating society, of the El Paso high school will entertain its members and friends with a program, including a debate, and several musical numbers Friday evening, October 27. The subject chosen for the debate is one of great interest to many, being, "Resolved, New Mexico's Constitution Should Have an Educational Qualification to the Exercise of the Franchise." The affirmative side is to be taken by Robert Mullin and Rupert Gillester, the negative by John Burch and Will Hawkins. There will also be a declamation by Irving Schwartz and a reading by Ed Freeman.

The examinations for the end of the first term of the present school year will begin the first of the week, consequently most of the students are "getting busy."

The third issue of the "Tattler," the sophomore number, is out. One of the most important items of the number is the following alumni note.

Geo. Eastery '11, has entered the Boston Technical college.

Miss Harriet Ellis, a former basketball star of the high school, is attending the University of Texas. Norman Morris and Clark Wright, both of 1911, are also attending the university.
